Joe -

Attached is a copy of the announcement that I received from NCSL. The major change appears to be the elimination of the Special Achievement Awards for (1) single, one-time achievement, (2) series of successful projects and or (3) one project over a period of years. The Career Service Awards are unchanged, except they have reduced the required number of copies of "summary statements" from 50 to 25.

Hope this is helpful. Will know more after talking with Mrs. Rose Boyd on Monday.

Best regards,

Awards program

The National Civil Service League has been a leader in the promotion of good government since the League was established in 1881. One of the ways it has promoted this concept in recent years has been through the Career Service Awards Program.

This annual program provides national recognition for ten federal employees who have distinguished themselves in public service.

The winners are selected based on demonstrated efficiency, achievement, character and service. They are nominated by agency and department heads and are given extensive publicity through radio, magazines, and newspapers.

Award recipients are honored guests at a presentation ceremony which is attended by leaders of government, business and the professions.

Approved For Release 2002/05/09 : CIA-RDP84-00313R000300050012-1 Criteria

The nominee must be employed in one of the career services of the federal government. This employment must span at least ten years. However, the service may include time in military service and employment in state or local as well as in the federal government.

Nominees must have a record of integrity and devotion to the principles of public service.

They must have demonstrated exceptional efficiency, sustained superior performance and accomplishment. Since many nominations will be considered, it is important that the nomination procedure be followed as outlined to facilitate selection.

Nominations should be made as early as possible. Final deadline for submission is September 15, 1978. The Awards ceremony will be held on November 2, 1978.
